History of Chick & Ruth's & The Scotlaur Inn Bed & Breakfast

Chick and Ruth Levitt moved from Baltimore to Annapolis with their three children in August of 1965. In taking over a sandwich shop on Main Street, Chick was to institute something that had diminished through the years. Most people had forgotten and young people have never known the "Ma & Pa" establishments.

This "unique" delicatessen not only serves quantities of quality food, but also quantities of genuine friendship that have lasted through the years. This is due to Chick's love, concern and interest in people. During the Legislative Session, you can find many of our most popular and successful law-makers enjoying the many combinations on the menu. During the boating season, Chick and Ruth have hosted some of the finest sailors in the world. But spend an afternoon, any day of the year at the "Delly", and you will find the "regulars". Some of these men and women literally grew up in Chick and Ruth's and they started bringing their children into the "Delly".

Iris, Teddy & Natalie, the Levitt children, all had their share of waiting tables, answering the phone, washing dishes, and even driving to Baltimore for bagels. Ted, at nine years old, was probably the youngest counterman on record. But, with a little ingenuity, a strong milk carton to stand on, a white shirt and black tie, Ted grew. And through the years, his respect for the restaurant and friendships with the customers also grew. In January 1981, Ted's wife, Beth, joined the Delly family and while working and raising their two children, Scott and Lauren, she is helping the family tradition live on.

Ruth passed away June 20, 1986 from cancer. In 1988, the Scotlaur Inn was opened above the Delly. Chick passed away January 22, 1995. Chick is now back with his wife & girlfriend, Ruth. The memories and traditions of Chick and Ruth live on with Ted & Beth. They wish to thank their friends for their patronage and they hope to continue to serve their usual fare of wholesome food, friendship and lodging for years to come.
